

6th October, 2025

Magnus Brunner

Commissioner for Internal Affairs and Migration
European Commission

Dear Colleague,

The Med5 has emerged as a powerful voice for Mediterranean front-line Member States, united in addressing migration and other shared challenges.

Through past editions, we have built a strong legacy of cooperation, and this ninth edition will be no different. We will focus on the implementation of the Pact on Migration and Asylum, including its challenges and opportunities, on the first annual solidarity pool under the Asylum and Migration Management Regulation (AMMR), and on funding considerations. We will also address the external dimension of migration and explore forward-looking solutions. Notably, the issue of return remains a key priority and will be part of our deliberations.

As in previous editions, we look forward to the active engagement of the European Commission, whose contributions will be key to the success of our discussions.

It is therefore my pleasure to invite you to the Ninth Med5 Ministerial Conference, to be held in Malta on 28–29 November 2025.

Further details, including the programme and logistical arrangements will be shared with you in the coming weeks.

I look forward to welcoming you to Malta.

Yours Truly

Hon. Byron Camilleri
Minister of Home Affairs, Security and Employment
